

SHOW & TELL

What you missed while you were busy parenting

email

print

share

Funflectors: Making Halloween Safer for Trick-or-Treaters

October 10, 2011

By Lauren At Parenting.Com

© glimling.com

When I heard there were "cute" reflectors kids could attach to their costumes to keep them safe from traffic on Halloween I rolled my eyes. Let's be real: nobody—kids or moms—want nerdy reflective tape junking up their awesome costume. But on Halloween, a night when countless kids are walking around in the dark, we have to remember to play it safe.

Plus: Easy Halloween Pumpkin Carving Stencils

Surely nobody will mind clipping one of these cute "funflectors" somewhere on their freakin' cute Frankenstein costume. (The chain clasp makes it snappable to almost anything.) Kids can pick from multi-colored ghosts, Jack-o-Lanterns, cats and skulls, making spooky-cute costumes even spookier.

Plus: Halloween Safety Guide

Best of all, kids will be safe on their candy gathering mission—the tags reflect enough light to be considered life savers.

Plus: Pregnant? Try This Easy Halloween Costume for Moms-to-Be!

After Halloween, clip it to their back pack. Can't hurt.

How will you keep your kids safe on Halloween?

Glimlings, $4.60 each, free shipping

Older Post: Halloween Costume of the Day: California Roll

Newer Post: Teen Dad Leaves Baby in Car While On Date

10 You

Like Cont

3

0

+1