Growth Chart Art

Great Mom Spotlight

Towards the end of the summer I was looking at a picture of Brody and I realized that his cargo shorts in the beginning of the summer were super long on him, and now they were just coming to his knees. I knew he had grown but I couldn't believe my little baby boy (he turned 2 in June) was now growing so fast! This is when I realized I wanted to start documenting his growth and I was looking into buying a growth chart.

I didn't want to just record Brody's height on our walls because I have heard of so many people doing this and it is one of those sentimental parts you think of when you move and leave your house. We are in a townhouse now and will probably only be our house another year or two, so I don't want to make any marks on the walls that I will be sad to leave behind. I started shopping for a growth chart but most of the ones you find are plastic or poor quality. It was at this same time I was sent a growth chart from Growth Chart Art. (www.GrowthChartArt.com) and it is just gorgeous!!

I was so excited; it looks like a beautiful piece of artwork that you can make into awesome family memorabilia. I was sent the sunflower growth chart. We ended up hanging it in between the kids' rooms, right next to their bathroom. It fits perfectly and looks gorgeous. I get so many compliments on it and it is a very pretty addition to our home.

Growth Chart Art has a number of wooden growth charts in fun designs that you are sure to love. They also make the perfect gift! The materials are all eco-friendly, they use soy-based inks, no-VOC paints, and re-purposed wood. You can also get the charts personalized with one or more names!

Definitely check out their site and trust me, the charts look good on their website, but they are even more gorgeous in person!
